State Notes:

The State of Kansas moved toward a community based mental health system. The majority of clients served by the community-based system are outpatients. Kansas cannot break out the inpatient costs; consequently all expenditures were classified as outpatient. Kansas closed one state hospital and moved to a community based system since 1997. Case management is primarily a community-based function and the state office does not have access to that information. The categories used for SMHA-controlled revenue from Medicaid in Kansas' classification are significantly different than the ones used in the tables. Due to this difference, the amount was included in administrative auspice. The disproportionate share Medicaid has steadily declined since 1999.
